FRENCH RAIL STRIKE ENDED, MILLERAND FIXING TERMS

Men Get No Wages For Lost Time: Dismissals Are Cancelled

CRISIS AVERTED

Premier Had Prepared Prompt Action To Stop General Walkout

(Reuter's Service)
Paris, March 2, 9:20 p.m.—The railway strike is over. Following a conference between M. Millerand, railway managers and delegates of the Railwaymen's Federation, the latter sent orders to all branch unions that work was to be resumed. The men accepted the terms of settlement as laid down by M. Millerand, after a brief discussion. The main points are: (1) the men shall receive no wages for the duration of the strike; (2) the dismissal of men who had refused to return to work is cancelled; (3) penalties inflicted in all other cases shall be reconsidered in a spirit of justice.

SUBURBAN SERVICES CHIEFLY AFFECTED

Paris, February 28 9:30 p.m.—The spread of the railway strike from the P. L. M. to other systems has not resulted in a complete stoppage on those lines; traffic is only partially disorganised, the suburban services being chiefly affected. In spite of the proclamation of a general strike numbers of men are returning to work, and the general impression is that the movement will fail.

The Government's swift action in ordering mobilisation of a large number of railwaymen has had excellent results. Paris and other cities have received their food supplies as usual. No disorders have been reported.

The strike movement is not popular and a large number of resolutions condemning it have been passed all over the country. The miners' representatives last night telegraphed to all miners' unions that work at the mines is not to cease.

GOVERNMENT PREPARED TO FEED THE COUNTRY

Paris, February 28, 4 p.m.—The Government is taking steps for the victualling of Paris and the country, and has issued instructions that perishable goods, lying in goods-yards, must be sold quickly, unthoughtful surpluses being distributed gratis.

Paris, February 28 (noon).—The National Federation of Railwaymen has ordered a general strike, in ordering a complete stoppage of all railway work, the Executive of the Federation admonished the strikers to maintain the utmost calm and to refrain from all provocative acts. Meanwhile the companies are receiving numerous offers of help from civilian volunteers and the army is energetically preparing systematic guards. It is noteworthy that the Premier, M. Millerand, has denounced the strike as part of a revolutionary plot.

There are grave apprehensions as regards the fate of Paris owing to the scarcity of coal and food-stuffs. It is declared that, if the strike lasts a week, Paris will be in darkness. It is stated that there is grave danger of other big unions, including the transport workers and the miners, striking in sympathy.

PREMIER READY TO MOBILISE WORKERS

London, February 28.—The Times Paris correspondent telegraphing yesterday says that the railway companies are acting with equal determination with the Government. Already over 300 strikers have been dismissed in.

Eight Tuchuns Organise To Dissolve Both Parliaments; Defy Gen. Chao's Enemies

Hold That Existence Of Legislature Is Cause Of Internal Dissension And Should Be Sacrificed For People's Welfare

With the Anfuites hot after the scalp of the Peking clique and with Yunnan and Kwangtung at loggerheads with each other, internal peace between the North and the South is as remote as ever. Meanwhile the Tuchuns are strengthening themselves with a new movement.

Eight military governors are concerned in this. Fengtien, Kiangsu, Chihli, Honan, Szechuen, Hupeh, Shantung and Kiangsi will form a league. Their platform, besides strengthening their own position, is to dissolve both Parliaments. The existence of the two Legislatures, they say, has been the cause of the internal dissension. Their dissolution, it is argued, would bring peace and amicable settlement.

The alliance was planned some time ago, but the attempt of the Anfu Club in removing the Honan Tuchun, General Chao Ti, only served to quicken the organisation. General Chao has withdrawn all his expeditionary forces and stationed them round his seat of government.

FORCES GATHERING

General Wu Pei-fu, the crack Northern fighter and idol of the Chihli army has been recalled by General Tsao Kun against the will of the Central Government. Trainloads of troops are being rushed to Chengchow, Honan, to reinforce the stronghold and most of the railroad cars have been commandeered by the Honan Tuchun. A military cordon has been drawn along the Peking-Hankow Railway north of Chengchow. People in these districts are panic-stricken.

The Anfu members of the Cabinet, on the other hand, are resolved to remove Chao. They threaten to resign in a body if the President refuses to promulgate the Presidential Mandate which they had drafted to dismiss Chao. Although Chin has consented to act as Premier for some more time, there had been no Cabinet meeting since last Friday when Chin absented himself.

Premier Chin's position is unchanged and is as embarrassing as ever. He cannot remove Chao; in fact, he cannot remove any Tuchun of Chihli or Anfu faction. He openly said so when he first assumed his office. It will be a breach of his pledge if he does. But the new Honan Tuchun, Wu Kwang-hsin, aside from being a relative of Tuan Chi-ji, is a close friend of the Premier. The Premier depended on him and General Chu Tung-fung to a large extent in his executive work. Furthermore, it was Wu and Chu who campaigned for the selection of Chin as Premier. Chin would be ungrateful in refusing to

German Agents Arrive In Vladivostok To Buy Materials

(Reuter's Service)
Vladivostok, March 4.—The Zemtvo Minister for Foreign Affairs, M. Grebenshikov, has issued a further note to the Japanese representative, Mr. Matsudaira, protesting against the intervention of the Japanese and the presence of Japanese armed forces in Russian territory.

Foreigners are hurriedly exporting their goods.

German agents have arrived here from Tsingtao and have started buying raw materials.

London, March 1.—The Moscow wireless note which the Soviet Government of Russia has sent to Japan, proposing the opening of peace negotiations, mentions earlier semi-official purporters between the Soviet Government and the Japanese Ambassador and proposes to renew negotiations on the basis of the special economic and commercial interests of Japan in the Far East with a view to an agreement satisfactory to both sides. The note adds it is hoped that the Japanese Expeditionary Corps will soon be withdrawn from Siberia.

Copenhagen, February 28.—A telegram from Riga states that the Foreign Ministers of Poland, Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Finland and Rumania are meeting shortly at Warsaw to discuss peace with the Soviet.

AMERICAN TROOPS LEAVING SIBERIA

An announcement made at the American Post Office yesterday indicates that the time when all American troops will be out of Siberia now may be measured in days, for this was to the effect that no more mail will be despatched to the American Post Office at Vladivostok, as this agency is to be closed.

The steamer Penza which sailed yesterday for Vladivostok carried the last mail for the Siberian port that will be handled through the American Post Office here. No definite reports concerning troop movements out of Siberia have been received recently, but it is known that a large number of the American forces already have been transferred to the Philippines. A radio message to the American Consulate this week said that the U. S. Transport Great Northern had sailed from San Francisco on March 2 for Vladivostok.

REDUCE INTEREST RATES, IS DEMAND IN MIXED COURT

Mandate Of Hangkow Tuchun Is Cited As Precedent For Action Here

USURY CHARGE IS MADE

Rate Of 26 Percent Now Being Assessed In Some Cases, Says Attorney

Charges that usury is being practiced in Shanghai were made yesterday in the Mixed Court when a case that contained many factors of interest in Chinese law was heard before American Assessor Tenney and Magistrate Tsang. It was alleged that interest at the rate of 26 percent is being exacted in some cases and was brought out that the Tuchun of Hangkow has issued a proclamation setting the highest possible charge for the use of money at 1 1/2 percent a month.

Mr. Tay O, represented by Mr. M. L. Heen, is suing the Yuen Chong Electric Company, represented by Mr. Paul M. Linebarger, for Taels 8,065.76 for principal and interest on a loan.

Mr. Linebarger argued that the plaintiff was not entitled to collect the interest since it showed yesterday in the Mixed Court when a case that contained many factors of interest in Chinese law was heard before American Assessor Tenney and Magistrate Tsang.

The plaintiff contended that inasmuch as he was obliged to pay two or three percent per month for the money that he borrowed he was entitled to the amount he claimed.

"That's the trouble with this whole nefarious system of usury that is holding China back," declared Mr. Linebarger. "Each lender blames the other for its consequences. The practice ought to stop all along the line. When usury is practiced the borrower should not be required to pay the interest. Shylock was an amiable and benevolent philanthropist compared with the methods of some money lenders in Shanghai. If the plaintiff loses his interest he likewise has his redress."

The plaintiff was asked if the defendant was not entitled to an offset on account of electrical work done in his residence.

MORE PROOF SOUGHT

"No wonder with such rates of interest that the plaintiff wears big diamonds and expensive brooches and has four residences," declared Mr. Linebarger. "My client has shown that he has a warm spot in his heart," asserted Mr. Heen, "by offering to take only one percent."

"That's a confession that the former rate was too high," declared Mr. Linebarger.

The plaintiff contended that he was only following the regular practice of money lending and that the rate was just.

The Court adjourned the case to allow the presentation of additional proof.

France Maintains Military Strength; Drafts 1920 Class

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, February 27.—The Chamber of Deputies has adopted the Bill authorizing the French Government to call up the whole 1920 class for military service. In the course of the debate M. Briand said it was absolutely necessary for France to show that she intended to maintain her military strength.

Both France's former enemies and her friends, the speaker added, should be given to understand that she intended to play a leading part in diplomacy. She was too proud, he said, to ask her friends for charity. It was her duty to say that she must have her rights.

ALSACE-LORRAINE DEPUTIES RECALL PROTEST OF 1871

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, March 3.—M. Deschanel accompanied by Marshal Poincaré was present at Bordeaux yesterday at the commemoration of the 49th anniversary of the solemn protest made by deputies from Alsace and Lorraine on March 1, 1871, against the separation of Alsace-Lorraine from France.

This was the new President's first official visit to the provinces. In the afternoon the famous session of the National Assembly in the Grand Theatre at Bordeaux was reconstructed in its identical setting, with Alsace and Lorraine deputies sitting in the seats which were occupied by their predecessors 49 years ago. When M. Deschanel entered the hall the entire Assembly rose to its feet and sang the "Marseillaise."

In an eloquent speech the President retraced the history of the war of 1870-1871 and of the victory of 1919.

He spoke of France's effort to restore prosperity and to guarantee security. M. Deschanel added: "By our million and a half dead, by our ten devastated departments, and by our ancestors and our children, we swear in the presence of Alsace-Lorraine not to die without having obtained for France the complete security which her heroism and genius merit."

FOREIGN POLICY IN CHINA NEEDS COMPLETE CHANGE

Whole Question Of Loans For Nation Requires New Supervision

MAKE PEKING PAY DEBTS

Correspondent Says Time Is Past For Opportunism And Half-Measures

BY NATHANIEL PEPPER

(Our Peking Correspondent)

Peking, March 3.—The £5,000,000 loan to China by the four Powers, which was all but consummated before the Lunar New Year has for the time faded from view. There are two reasons.

The first was a pure matter of mechanics. An advance was to have been made to tide the Government over the New Year to meet its New Year obligations.

It was to have been made by the Japanese and American banks jointly because the French and British banks were not in a position then to take their share. Before the American bank could act, however, it had to have cable instructions from home and such instructions failed to come in time. With cable conditions as they are it is impossible to conclude the negotiations in the few days between China's acceptance of the Banking Group's conditions and the falling of the New Year.

The second reason was the unsatisfactoriness of China's reply accepting the Group's conditions. Two of those conditions were the immediate conclusion of peace between the North and South and the use of the loan's proceeds at least partially for the disarmament of troops, with foreign supervision of the disarmament. China's reply to those conditions, as I pointed out by telegraph at the time was evasive and palpably insincere.

LOOPHOLES ON PEACE

It accepted the principle of supervision but left itself loopholes on peace and disarmament. As to peace it said that it was already trying to conclude peace, as Wang Yi-tang was in Shanghai for that purpose. As to disarmament it said it was already disbanding troops. By inference it said that it would only continue to do as it had been doing. Which means that it would do nothing at all.

For Wang Yi-tang's presence in Shanghai is no sincere effort for peace. Nor is anything that Wang Yi-tang has done calculated to bring about a genuine peace, a peace of compromise and reconstruction. Wang Yi-tang is an Anfu man. He is president of the Anfu Club. His acts in Shanghai have been Anfu political moves as much as gestures of peace. The peace that the Four Powers stipulated was not that kind of peace maneuvering—political wire-pulling. It was a sincere reconciliation of the two estranged sections of the country. That can only come about by a fresh start. However much talk there may be in Shanghai about forthcoming peace conferences and the like—and I have but just returned from Shanghai—it can be said safely that there will be no peace under present conditions. For one thing, it seems certain that there must

Denniston Players Appear In Popular Farce Tonight

The popular Denniston Players are in Shanghai for a brief return engagement on their way to Manila after a triumphal tour through interior China and tonight at the Lyceum Theater will present the hilarious farce, "Nightie Night" with Miss Warda Howard and Miss Florence Chapman in the leading roles.

MISS FLORENCE CHAPMAN

Miss Howard, it will be recalled, was left behind because of illness when the company concluded its former local engagement and for some time was in a serious condition. She is convalescent, however, and anxious to get back into her stage work again. In many of the bills of Mr. Denniston's repertoire Miss Chapman took Miss Howard's place during the Tientsin, Peking and Hankow performances.

All the old favorites will be in tonight's cast and a record house is expected. The farce, "Nightie Night" scored a big hit with local play-goers when last seen here—as big a hit as it has scored in New York where for months it has been playing to capacity houses.

An effort is being made to get The Denniston Players to put on "The Acquittal" before their departure Wednesday and if theater arrangements can be made they will undoubtedly do so. The play proved one of their notable successes and there is a big popular demand for a repeat performance.

ELTINGE PLAYER AID KING'S FUND

Disabled Soldiers To Get Benefit From Show At Astor Last Night

The King's Fund for the Disabled was materially aided to last evening by a benefit performance given by the Eltinge company at the Astor House under the auspices of Sir Everard Fraser, British consul-general.

Mr. Leo Heers, Mr. Eltinge and Miss Phyllis Gordon were the stars of the evening. Miss Marjorie Carville, as Marionne, made a great hit when, assisted by a dancing chorus, she put on the number and later staged "The Camero Girl."

Miss Cleo Gasconne, whose voice is marvelous, is billed as the world's smallest prima donna. She has so wonderful and powerful a voice that she is able literally to bring an audience out of their seats in appreciation of her songs.

Ford and Price in their dances on a silver thread were a sensation on the program. Mr. Eltinge bowed a stage presence that he did not have years ago as "prima donna" with Cohan and Harris' Minstrels, when "Honey Boy" Evans was starred, although his voice was not so good.

The dance revue was of exceptional merit. The dancers had been well trained, were graceful and had physical charm. Bonnell and Lee, as "Two Scotch Lassies," were well received. The Littlejohns gave a most acceptable number, the "Incidental dances" were beautiful and, in fact, the whole program was pleasing.

Foreign Policy In China Needs Complete Change

be some other Northern delegate than Wang Yi-tang and he must be a delegate who commands more confidence and faith than the head of the Anfu Club.

BETTER LOAN GUARANTEES

So far as disbandment goes the same is true. The Peking government said it was already disbanding troops and intimated that it would do so only in the same way. Aside from its intangible statements there is no proof whatever that it actually has done so except on paper. It may have disbanded certain units—troops belonging to commanders opposed to the Anfu Club. But the kind of disbandment that will satisfy the Four Powers is a statement of definite divisions, definite regiments, definite battalions disbanded, with arms to prove it. Any other kind would be a great farce. And it is unthinkable that with all the experience of the last few years behind them the Legations and the banks will be taken in by such a farce and bury good money in it besides, while all Europe cries for capital.

Out of that combination of circumstances the loan fell through, at least for the time. Directly it was mechanically impossible to conclude the negotiations. But even if it had not been the money probably would not have been forthcoming anyway without better guarantees than the Chinese government had given.

NEW FOREIGN POLICY

Whether the loan will be revived is problematical. It is sincerely to be hoped that it will not be on the same scale and in the same way. China needs financial assistance—yes. But that assistance must be of such a scale as to cover fundamental needs and on a broad enough basis to lay down a new foundation of foreign policy in China. It must be a huge sum.

cluding a number of syndicalist leaders.

Paris, February 27.—In the Chamber of Deputies today, the Premier, M. Millerand, announced his decision to mobilize the sections of the P.L.M. railwaymen, and indicated that firm measures would be adhered to. He said that in his opinion the French would be equally keen and resourceful in breaking down the strike as the British were last October. The Premier stated that the Government would summon an arbitration committee jointly composed of management and staff representatives when work was resumed. The Government's proposals were adopted by 511 votes to 270.

Reports tonight (Friday) show that the situation is practically unchanged although the mobilization order will probably have a strong effect. Postal communications have not been much affected.

The Liberte states that the authorities have discovered the existence of a revolutionary organization which is believed to be fomenting the strike.

Paris, February 27 11 p.m.—On his return from London M. Millerand had conferences with delegates of the National Federation of Railwaymen.

The railway strike has had little effect on the Paris Bourse. There was some falling off in orders today but quotations were firm.

Lansing Successor, Bainbridge Colby, Likes Wilson Views

(Reuter's Service)
New York, February 28.—Mr. Bainbridge Colby, the new Secretary of State, in an interview said that he was thoroughly in accord with the League of Nations and all President Wilson's other views.

large enough really to effect disbandment and a political reorganization. To effect that it must have rigid conditions of supervision. It must put the whole question of loans under foreign control, united control, control wielded for the benefit of China.

If the government of China is unwilling to pay that price for assistance, it must be started out. Probably it will be unwilling, for to comply is to commit suicide. The present government of China has no purpose in existence other than its own enrichment and it cannot accomplish that under foreign control. If it has to, it will comply and then try to evade its obligations. The task of foreign diplomacy will be to prevent evasion. Under any circumstances, the time has passed for self-measures, for piecemeal loans, for opportunism. Foreign diplomacy in China is faced with a new-washed slate, on which it must write a new principle and a new program.

Ezra In Address Tells How Shanghai's Electric Plant Can Be Financed

Story Of How Use Of Current Grew And Developed In International Settlement Is Unfolded In Address Before Civic League

The history of the use of electricity in Shanghai was traced and a scheme to finance huge and costly extensions that must be made was presented yesterday afternoon in an address given before the Civic League by Mr. Ezra in the lecture hall of the Royal Asiatic Society. Mr. Cecil Holiday presided at the meeting which was well attended.

The speaker told of the first enterprise of a private company that was formed to provide current for lighting. This, he said, did not prove to be much of a success and eventually was taken over by the Municipal Council. At that time and for a considerable period afterwards, Mr. Ezra said, there was no idea of providing current for any other purpose than lighting.

With the progress made throughout the world in electrical development and with the rapid growth of Shanghai new problems began to appear and the big question at that time, he said, was to find uses for the electrical plant through the hours of the day when it was not in service. With the rapid growth and extension of the city and the wider use of current for lighting calling for higher and higher peak loads upon the electrical plant, through the hours when lights were needed the problem of providing uses for electricity through the day grew more serious.

THE FIRST STATION

He told of the building of the Pearson Road station and of its rapid enlargement to meet swiftly growing needs and went on to speak of the erection of the Riverside station. It was after this plant came into being, he said, that the use of current to supply power first began to develop in Shanghai.

It was found, he said, that the full capacity of the new Riverside station, to supply current was used as soon as the plant went into service and the need of further enlargements for the future, entailing further large outlays was needed. All Shanghai's growth and development as a manufacturing center began to be dependent upon the production of electrical power and rapidly increasing demands made larger and larger extensions of plant necessary. The heavy financial drain on the Settlement to meet these needs became more and more of a problem, the speaker said. But the ratepayers were unwilling to turn the whole thing over to a public company in line with a proposal that was made.

Though originally lighting was the only use for which current was produced, commercial development was such that when current began to be used to produce power the demands from new mills and factories grew larger and larger until last year nearly six times as much current was used for power as for lighting. The number of lighting units produced last year totalled 16,378,793, he said, while the units for power in the period mounted to 84,621,695.

GROWTH CONTINUES

The speaker pointed out that there has been no halt in the increasing demands for current and the consequent need for plant extensions in recent years. The burden of capital expenditure, to provide larger and larger plants only grew greater and greater, he said, until needs for other public works had to be neglected and all available municipal funds were called for to keep pace with the swiftly growing requirements of the electrical department. He tended to bring up. One of these was whether the present depreciation charge against the electrical plant of the municipality was adequate and the other was the question of whether rates now being charged are profitable and in connection with this he raised a query about the relation of the rates charged for lighting to those assessed for power.

Mr. G. M. Wheelock of Messrs. Wheelock and Company of Shanghai and Miss Lois Grimmer, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Grimmer of St. John, N.B., were married at St. John on February 24.

LIEU-KING

The marriage of Mr. D. K. Lieu, professor of Tsing Hua College, and Miss King Yung-tung, daughter of Mr. T. King of the North China Daily News was solemnized in the presence of over 300 friends at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. yesterday. Dr. A. P. Parker performed the ceremony which was impressive and interesting.

Dr. H. L. Huang of Columbia University acted as best man and Miss Kaung Kweo-yun was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were the Misses King Sui-tung and Mao Yueh-ngoo and the two nieces of the bride were flower maids. Master King Kyung-chang was ring bearer.

The program opened with a solo by Miss Mary Lou White of Huchow with Miss Lelia W. Troy officiating at the piano. To the tune of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, the bride party entered escorted by a chorus from the Victoria Girls' School, of Huchow, Chekiang, from which the bride graduated.

The religious ceremony was conducted in English.

Immediately following the wedding, a banquet was held at the Oriental Hotel at which over 100 Chinese and foreign friends of the couple attended. The usual toast to the bride and groom was proposed. After the banquet the party adjourned to the Oriental Hotel, where numerous beautiful gifts to the young couple were exhibited. Mr. and Mrs. Lieu will remain in Shanghai for a week, after which Mr. Lieu will resume his teaching work at Tsing Hua. Among the guests present were Mr. C. C. Nieh, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Green, Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Lee, Mr. R. Wood, Mr. Loy Chang, Mr. William Lockwood, Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Mei, Mr. C. G. Hoh, Mr. and Mrs. K. S. Li, Mr. Turpin Hsi, Mr. T. M. Hsi and Mr. P. K. Chu.

Later he answered a question raised by Mr. A. J. Hughes who suggested that the debentures, issued in large amounts might become subject to market fluctuations in such a way that a power user might be required by the municipality to buy them at a price above that of the open market. Mr. Ezra contended that the value of the debentures would be maintained by reason of the fact that a power user would be obliged to retain them as long as he continued to use power. He declared that they could never become a drug on the market for this reason.

In closing his address Mr. Ezra said he had two questions he in-

THE BROWN DERBY

The old brown kelly is any size shape, material and cost. I will fit any skull from a berry sized coco to an egg shaped knob. Duke and peasant prince and pauper—it fits 'em all. The epidemic was started by a gent who took his wife along to help him buy a hat. Any cuckoo who does that, ought to wear rhinestone hatpins in his derbies. This baby looked plenty sassy in a green velvet, so his wife picked out a brown derby instead.

Ever since, then, the brown disk has been the insignia of those who were weighed in the balance and found unbalanced. It is a roving trophy, the winner holding it for a year.

Chop Imitation Case Continued

Court Demands That Identity Of Culprit Be Revealed By Cotton Guild

Demand that the ownership of a cargo of cotton yarn now held at Gordon Road police station on charges that the chop of the Oriental Cotton Spinning and Weaving Company was counterfeited be disclosed was made in the Mixed Court yesterday by British Assessor Grant Jones and Magistrate Li. The case was adjourned for a week while the court ordered that the cotton guild investigate the matter and furnish the desired information. The demand was made when the court was informed that the cotton guild was prepared to furnish a guarantee of good faith in connection with the cargo and that the younger brother of a member of the organisation had 'foolishly' imitated the chop.

The assessor said: "I do not like these rascals getting off like this. What we want to know is who printed these bills."

The yarn was seized from a cargo boat in Soochow Creek. It is alleged to have been loaded from a godown in Markham Road, where bits of torn labels were discovered. These are said to have shown that they were affixed to the cargo in that godown.

The Oriental Cotton Spinning and Weaving company asserts that it never sends its chops to a godown but always affixes them at the mill.

The Adriatic Question

THE correspondence between President Wilson and the British and French Governments inside public for the first time in the Reuter cable which we published yesterday reveals the fact that the dispute which has arisen between them over the Adriatic settlement is of a far more serious nature than had been suspected.

The agreement of December 9, which was reached in conference with the United States, apparently was superseded by the agreement of January 14 made without the consent of the United States which was one of the signatories of the earlier one, for President Wilson in his reply inquired "whether the British and French intended to settle pending European questions and then communicate them to the United States." He also asked that the settlement of December 9 in which the United States had acquiesced, be restored to life, threatening otherwise to withdraw the Peace Treaty and the French Treaty from the Senate. The reply of the French and British apparently was of a conciliatory nature, and there, so far as we know, the matter, as between them, rests.

A later telegram, however, gives hope that a settlement of this small but vexatious question may be reached through direct negotiations between Italy and Jugoslavia. A London despatch of February 27 says that the Supreme Council now is willing to submit the dispute to the Italian and Jugoslavians who are the peoples at interest. It is added that Signor Nitti has accepted this proposal. This marks a change in the Italian attitude for not long ago Signor Nitti threatened that if the Jugo-Slavs did not accept his final proposal he would cease all efforts at compromise and would demand the execution of the Treaty of London, which left Fiume to the Slavs but gave Italy most of Dalmatia. The Jugo-Slavs, notwithstanding this threat, did not accept the proposal.

This Adriatic mess has been the subject of comment throughout America for a year or more and it has served as emphatically as the Turkish problem which is many times larger, to bring to the knowledge of Americans the character of the disputes which continually distract the attention of European diplomats from more important matters. It has to a large extent opened the eyes of America to the pettiness and moral poverty that pervade the politics of Europe. Can there be any wonder that America is inclined to grow cautious and draw aloof?

A menacing ultimatum is laid down. It apparently means nothing. An ultimatum couched in a bit more stilted follows from the other side. It apparently also means nothing. Both sides are nearly rocking the boat. Nothing is accepted as final. Results are to be seen in the exchange of notes between America, France and Britain. How important to the future welfare of the world is the friendship of these three great powers? Yet they fall apart on such a comparatively trivial and localized issue as this one!

The New York Times recently put the failure to settle this question down to the influence of bad habit! It said:

"The dispute seems to be over nothing but the island of Lissa and the triangle of territory in the southeastern corner of Istria, extending from the boundary line which President Wilson would have favored, up to Fiume. Lissa is strategically important if the opposite shores of the Adriatic are held by hostile Powers with competing navies, but the Jugo-Slavs will have no war fleet. The island has a sentimental value to Italy; it would mean something to raise the Italian flag on the fortress off which the Italian fleet was beaten in 1866; but the area is thirty-eight square miles and the population less than ten thousand. The triangle between Monte Maggiore and Fiume has a population not much greater; its most important town has some two thousand people.

"Less than a hundred square miles of land and some twenty or thirty thousand people are yet in dispute, and for this two excitabile nations remain on the verge of war. It is true that the great majority of these people are Slavs, and that the Italians will elsewhere annex Slavs far out-numbering the Italians who will be left in Jugo-Slavia. But the question for the Jugo-Slav people and Government to consider is not whether they have a better chronographic right than the Italians to Lissa and Volosca, but whether Lissa and Volosca are worth the continuance of a strained situation which a single act of violence might turn into war. No doubt each side hopes to get some further concession from the other: perhaps the Slavs hope to profit from the Italian strike. If so, they have some excuse in the long history of Italian efforts to foment rebellion and division in Jugo-Slavia; but it is not practical politics. The points left at issue are not worth fighting for and not worth even further argument in present conditions. Mr. Nitti's talk about going back to the Treaty of London is not convincing; he would have to fight the Slavs to get Dalmatia, and his own people would never consent to the complete surrender of Fiume to a Slav State which the treaty provided. But prolongation of the dispute can bring no good and may bring much harm."

A Fighting Parson

By JOHN D. BARRY
(San Francisco Chronicle)

Last evening I had a talk with a clergyman whose ruddy, happy face belied his 70 years, about the insulting of women in the streets.
He had seen one of my articles on the subject and he had been interested in the discussion.
"I had an experience a good many years ago," he said, "that you may like to hear about. My wife, who was then 35 years old or so, happened to make a journey between San Francisco and Chicago. On the way she became violently sick. A man in a seat near hers was extremely solicitous and kind. He did a great many little services for her. When she reached Chicago she said goodbye to him and they exchanged cards.
He had told her that he was going straight through to New York. So she said that when he came back through Chicago, where she was living, on his way to his home in Denver, she'd be glad to have him call. When I met her at the station he had already gone and after she had told me about him I was sorry not to have a chance to make his acquaintance. However we both looked forward to seeing him later. From New York my wife received a letter from him shortly afterward. It was a peculiar kind of letter, as I thought.
Among other things the man said that he wouldn't be in Chicago for several weeks and that if she happened to be in New York he'd like to see her. We both decided the letter didn't require answering.
A few weeks later she received another letter, this time a little more intimate, almost affectionate.
It didn't get any answer either.
Shortly afterward she had a third letter from him. He said that he would be in Chicago in a couple of days and he asked my wife to meet him and have dinner with him at his hotel on a certain evening. When my wife showed me the letter I was, of course, furious. I told her to pay no attention. I didn't intend to tell her that I would go down to the hotel myself. But I went down on the morning of the day proposed for the meeting and I went straight up to the fellow's room.

He was there. I locked the door, told him who I was and I demanded an apology. He said, with some anger, that there was nothing to apologize for, as he hadn't meant to insult my wife, and he wanted to know how I dared to come into his room like that and lock the door. At this point his manner was so offensive that I landed one on his jaw. We fought in that room for about five minutes. As a boy in college I'd been taught how to fight by an excellent teacher, a former pugilist.
He gave me a good many of the tricks that are practiced by the Japanese and generally called jiu jitsu. In about five minutes I had the fellow down and practically out. If I had gone much farther I suppose I should have been responsible for his death. At any rate, I'd given him enough. I unlocked the door and went out of the room and I never saw him again."

"Were you much damaged yourself?" I asked.
"He tore off my collar and necktie and when I got into the street, I found that I had bruised one of my knuckles. My hand wasn't of much use for several days. However, I didn't mind that."

"Did you ever hear from the incident in any way?"
"Yes, from a friend of mine in Chicago, a lawyer. That fellow went to him and asked him if anything could be done about the matter. My friend advised him in his own interest to let it drop. So he did."

"How did your wife feel when you told her about it?"
"Oh, she was horrified, of course.
She always is horrified when I get into those messes."
"Ah! Then you have got into other messes of the same kind?"
"Oh, yes. Occasionally."

"Are you Southern?"
The question was received with a faint smile.

"Not exactly. But I was born in Pennsylvania near the Virginia line."

"And how do you reconcile your fighting proclivities with your Christianity?"

"Oh, the devil. I don't try to do any reconciling. I suppose I fight because I want to. Perhaps I wouldn't be so quick to fight if I didn't know I could get away with it. You see, when a man has acquired the science of fighting it's comparatively easy for him to knock any one out, unless he gets up against some one that has the science, too. I've never had that particular kind of bad luck. Once, when I was passing through Cheyenne, on my way to the Pacific Coast, I happened to be walking up and down the platform of a railroad station with a lady I'd met on the train. As we passed a couple of men one of them made a remark that I considered insulting to the lady. I said to him under my breath, 'I'll come back in a minute and settle with you.' I went up the stairs and hit him in the eye.

He tried to reach for his gun, but I kept his fists too busy. When I got through with him he was lying between the tracks and the platform. Afterwards, they told me he was a notorious Cheyenne gambler. The local newspaper people made a lot of the story about the fighting parson and it was put on the Associated Press wire. It actually helped me very much in my work. For some months it filled the churches where I did my preaching. It's curious how people like to hear of a parson that can fight."

"Do you really think your way of settling matters of this sort is good?"
"No, I don't. I've never allowed my son to learn the science of fighting. If I hadn't learned it, I should have had more self-control.
I shouldn't have been so eager to use my science. I realize, of course, that on several occasions it has brought me pretty close to death. In that Chicago affair, for instance, I noticed that as we fought the fellow kept trying hard to get over to the bed. He afterward told my lawyer friend that he had a gun there, under the pillow. If he had reached the gun it would have been all up with me.
However, the fact remains that these fellows who insult women.
We've got to teach them a lesson."

"But doesn't the way you have chosen often do more harm than good?"
"Well, perhaps. Now and then a terrible mistake is made. And now and then, of course, the fellow that's in the right gets the worst of it. But, all things considered, I can't honestly say that I have any regrets."

You see, he shared the national feeling that made fighting in a good cause or what could pass for such, an ideal. It persisted in spite of his perfectly sincere advice of Christianity, with its maintenance of another ideal that contradicted it absolutely.

He illustrated the amazing capacity of the human mind to go on serenely and even happily in maintaining beliefs that couldn't possibly work together, the kind of contradiction responsible for so many puzzling circumstances in our lives.

Wood Alcohol

By WALT MASSON

On New Year's day I made this pledge, concerning which I do not hesitate: "While I infest this mundane ball, I will not drink wood alcohol." When I am thirsty I may drink a quart or two of purple ink, and I won't draw the line. I won't foam mugs of kerosene; a man may swig such harmless drinks and not accumulate a fine; but since I wish to live a while, and kick around and sing and smile, and juggle the shroud and bier and pall, I will not sip wood alcohol. Strong vinegar is not so bad, and it's for sale in every grade; and liquid bluing hits the spot when one is worn and tired and hot; and one can lay wood ashes by and make a lot of wholesome lye; there are a hundred tempting drinks which should appeal to thirsty ginks, and yet, poor sumps, they weakly fall for noxious stove-wood alcohol.
And then the hearse goes up the road, and takes them to their last abode, and folks along the right of way exclaim, "Alas! Alackaday!
New year's what prohibition means!
Its spilled our everlasting beam!
The law has shut off gin and rye, and every day its victims die!"

Fine Silk From Spiders

In Madagascar experiments have been made with spider's web as a substitute for silk, and the results are so encouraging that Henri Blin expressed the hope in La Science et la Vie that a great and lucrative industry will result.

Many persons, he says, have tried to utilize spider's web. G. Guenau, a distinguished seventeenth century zoologist, described clothes made of it by the inhabitants of Paraguay.
In 1790 Bon Saint-Hilaire, President of the Court of Accounts at Montpellier, actually made a few pairs of stockings and gloves of spider's web. Mr. Rolt, an English silk spinner obtained from 25 spiders a thread three and three-quarters yards long, which he wound on a spool.

The female habile is about two and three-quarter inches long.

Old Jaffa And Haifa In Race To Become Port Of Palestine

(New York Sun)

What city will be the new harbor of the new Palestine, modern counterpart of ancient Tyre, supreme as the leading city of the eastern Mediterranean, serving as the outlet for the vast industrial and agricultural production that will result from the elaborate reconstruction program soon to be launched in Palestine?

Will it be ancient Jaffa, more modern Haifa, or a new city to be built along the extensive Palestine coast line, where experts determine is the most favorable location for the big port that will be necessary to handle the large volume of business that will develop with the political and economic restoration of Palestine?

A merry Chamber of Commerce war has developed between Jaffa and Haifa in the race to land the modern harbor, and with it the opportunity to become the leading city of the entire Near East.
Neither Beirut nor Acre is given much serious consideration as harbor possibilities. Beirut, because it hasn't a good natural harbor and its communication with the hinterland is bad, and Acre, because its town structure prohibits large growth, its connections with the hinterland are also poor and most of its leading merchants, sensing the coming supremacy of Haifa, have moved there.

MODERNISED PALESTINE
That Palestine is not entirely the old fashioned lagging land which is the general opinion of it, but that it is being rapidly modernised through active commercial enterprise, is shown by the spirited bidding of Jaffa and Haifa for the port, for which plans have already been projected by the Zionist Organisation of America through its Society of Engineers, by the British Government, French engineers and private individuals in Palestine.

Both cities organized Chambers of Commerce last summer, whose principal work was to convince the various organizations, capitalists, governments and private individuals interested that it was the logical city to become the gateway of Palestine and its vast fertile hin-terland, including the rich plains of Mesopotamia.

So far Haifa has the edge on its more ancient rival. A recent cable from London reports that the British Government plans harbor improvements at Haifa, costing $5-$6,000,000, while another London report states that the Anglo-Persian Oil Company is to use Haifa as the terminus of a pipe line between 350 and 400 miles in length, costing $48,665,000, to give it a direct Mediterranean outlet for its products.

The route of the pipe line has not been determined, according to the report which states that it may either follow the Bagdad Railroad or a direct line across the country, in which case, the report emphasises, there is the added possibility of the construction of a British railroad across Mesopotamia.

SCHOOL FOR FISHERMEN

Another boost for Haifa has resulted from the organization of a water farm and school for fishermen at Tantura near Haifa, on land and buildings donated by Baron James de Rothschild, which will make Haifa the center of the comparatively new fishing industry in Palestine.

The rivalry between Jaffa and Haifa over the harbor assumes a timely importance at this time, because the construction of an adequate port will be the first big job to be tackled in the reconstruction program to be carried out by the Zionist Organisation of America through its $10,000,000 restoration campaign which opens in New York city January 15.

Plans drawn up by engineering experts of the Zionist Society of Engineers call for an initial expenditure of $1,250,000 with which to build sea walls, jetties, piers, etc., the fundamental requirements of a harbor, to be followed in time by the construction of open piers, quays, a lighthouse and dry dock.

The Zionist engineers will locate the harbor, somewhere between Jaffa, and Haifa perhaps in either city, perhaps in a new city, to be determined by coast line surveys.

In connection with the construction of the harbor the Zionist Society of Engineers plans to connect the port with all parts of Palestine through a network of railroad lines and to build a gigantic stone quarry with which to provide materials for harbor improvements. Also their plans call for an appropriation of $10,000,000 to establish a merchant marine to provide adequate shipping facilities to handle Palestine's increased commercial development.

Both Jaffa and Haifa are ignored by harbor plans proposed by S.
Jabnelli, a well known public figure in Palestine, who, in his development projects, declares that the first step is in the creation of a national economic center in the south of Palestine by the construction of a new city on the sea coast with a harbor.

"This new town must be connected by a new railroad line with Eastern Palestine, Jerusalem and the Dead Sea, and this new railroad line should further extend from Jericho to Tiberias and Upper Galilee," he explained.
"Branch lines and motor and wagon services should connect the new harbor with all of Southern Palestine."

The Jaffa Chamber of Commerce, as one of the opening broadsides in its campaign, gives the following reasons in its Quarterly Review why it should land the harbor:

"Jaffa lies almost in the middle of the Palestine coastline, while Haifa is situated in the north.
Thus goods can be better distributed from and collected at Jaffa.
Moreover, the output of the hin-terland of Haifa is unimportant as compared with that of Jaffa. The harbor of Haifa was to a very great extent up to now fed by grain from the Hauran, but supposing a tariff wall is established in Syria what will then happen to Haifa? On the other hand the mineral wealth of the region of the Dead Sea and the Jordan valley is very great, and here again it is Jaffa, not Haifa, through which the manufactured commodities and minerals will be exported."

After pointing out that Jaffa had $28,558 more imports than Haifa in 1912-13 and $31,114 more in exports the Jaffa Chamber of Commerce declares that another consideration which should bring the harbor to Jaffa is the fact that practically all tourists pass through Jaffa and that the number of tourists will reach 250,000 annually.
The Department of Trade and Industry of the Zionist organization declares that the foregoing views are one-sided and mentions the fact that Haifa is the terminus of the Hedjaz railroad and the gateway of the fertile valley of the Euphrates and that it possesses a natural, first class harbor, while an artificial harbor will have to be built at Jaffa.

Most engineering experts, capitalists and correspondents who have surveyed the wonderful possibilities of a harbor along the Palestine coast becoming the future outlet of Mesopotamia favor Haifa.
By dredging the bay, which is ten miles long and three miles wide, vessels of 30 foot draft could be accommodated at a pier there, and vessels of greater draft out, which would take care of any vessels now plying the Eastern Mediterranean.

Haifa is not only the logical outlet for Palestine but also for Damascus, the great granary of the Hauran and the future port of Mesopotamia. It is pointed out by foreign trade experts.

By Rocket To The Moon

Under the auspices of the Smithsonian Institution Professor Robert H. Goddard is preparing an invention which may develop into something of interest to high flying humans who have been bored by the limitations of airplanes and balloons. This aerial engine, a rocket containing charges which explode at intervals, is expected, in its form as now planned, to rise 230 miles. Then, like the familiar Goddard rocket, its impetus delayed by a self-launching parachute.

However great the scientific interest may be in a device which could take the temperature of space out beyond the atmosphere which cloaks the earth, a larger human interest is aroused when it is suggested that through the development of the invention the moon might be reached. This journey has been long
New York Sun.

awaited by persons to whom our own planet is an old story. The Goddard device would cover the space quickly, just as Jules Verne's and Poe's did.

Men have flown across the ocean.
One has sailed 34,616 feet above the sea's level. They sit around in dry clubs, full only of weariness from having nothing desperate to do. It is certain that there is some fellow on earth who would be delighted to be shot to the moon. When the Goddard rocket is perfected the bored man will have his chance.
Relatives may tell him that there is no returning from the moon, once you get there; but that is not a good argument with the man who will go. "What of that?" he will say; "there's nothing to come back here for—nothing but polo games, ice yachting, tarpon fishing, lion hunting and that sort of rot."—

"One leads where many follow."

Hall's Distemper has led the way to a new era in house decoration—the era of brighter, cleaner and healthier homes.

It is the most durable of all decorations, lasting for years with freshness unimpaired, whereas wall-papers deteriorate from the first day by fading and accumulating dust and dirt.

Hall's Distemper is a thorough disinfectant, and is applied directly upon the wall, forming a hard surface, from which dust and dirt may be "spring-cleaned" by lightly sponging with warm water.

Hall's Distemper
is a unique preparation and has the recommendation of leading sanitary authorities, architects, and decorators everywhere.

Sir Walter Scott And His Dogs

Sir Walter Scott's affection for his numerous canine friends amounted almost to a passion, and evidence of this may be traced in his private letters, in his Journal, and throughout the Waverley Novels. Byron professed to love dogs for their unlikeliness to men, but Scott loved his dogs for the human traits which they possessed. He studied their different temperaments, enjoyed their companionship, and enriched the pages of his imaginative writings accordingly. The facts here recorded are taken from an essay, "Sir Walter Scott and His Dogs," by Percy Stevenson in "The Cornhill Magazine."

While residing at Ashiestiel, Scott made his frequent journeys between Edinburgh and Tweedside in the mail coach. He always had a canine favorite with him, and invariably took a seat for the dog as well as himself. No doubt the dog preferred running in front of the horses or coursing an odd roadside rabbit, but when he got tired there was his seat beside him. When Scott made his first visit to London he was accompanied by his favorite, Camp. Scott spoke to him as if the dog understood what was said, and Lockhart tells us Camp certainly did understand. Camp died in Edinburgh in 1809 and was buried behind 39 Castle Street, immediately opposite the window of Scott's library. Lockhart adds: "My wife told me that she remembered the whole family standing in tears about the grave, as Scott himself smoothed down the turf above Camp with the saddest expression of face she had ever seen in him. He had been engaged to dine abroad that day, but apologised on account of the death of a dear old friend."

Camp's appearance is familiar through the Raeburn portraits of 1803 and 1809—the latter containing in addition the greyhounds Douglas and Percy.

In writing to Lady Abercrom about his "poor deceased Camp," Scott said: "My friends wrote as many elegies for him in different languages as ever were poured forth by Oxford or Cambridge on the death of a crowned head. I have Latin, French, Italian, Greek, Hebrew, German, Arabic and Hindostanee poems to his memory."

While writing "Marmion" in his study at Ashiestiel, Scott left one window open so that his two greyhounds might leap out and in as the fancy moved them.

Perhaps the most famous of all Sir Walter's favorites was a staghound, about six feet long from the tip of the nose to the tail, and high and strong in proportion, but quite gentle. He was named Malda. The portrait of him by Landseer has been engraved and is well known. When old age prevented Malda from following his master far afield, Scott wrote:

"I have sometimes thought of the final cause of dogs having such short lives, and I am quite satisfied it is in compassion to the human race; for if we suffer so much in losing a dog after an acquaintance of ten or twelve years, what would it be if they were to live double that time?"

Washington Irving visited Abbotford in the autumn of 1817. His account of his arrival shows Scott's catholic taste in canine types.

"The noise of the chaise had disturbed the quite of the establishment. Out sallied the warden of the castle, a black greyhound; and leaping on one of the blocks of stone, began a furious barking. His alarm brought out the whole garrison of dogs—both mongrel, puppy, whelp, and hound, and curs of low degree,—all open-mouthed and vociferous."

Scott's interest in his dogs was not a mere fairweather fancy. In the dark of December, 1825, when threatened with rain so far as material things go, when confronted with a debt of some $550,000 and with the loss of Abbotford, he writes in his Journal:

"I was to have gone there on Saturday in joy and prosperity to receive my friends. My dogs will wait for me in vain. It is foolish—but the thoughts of parting from these dumb creatures have moved me more than any of the painful reflections I have put down. Poor things, I must get them kind masters; there may be yet those who love me love my dog because it has been mine. I must end this, or I shall lose the tone of mind with which men should meet distress."

Six months after the above extract was penned, when he had no longer a house in Edinburgh, but living in "Mrs. Brown's lodgings" at 4 North St. David Street, we find this entry: "Billous and headache this morning. A dog howl'd all night and left me little sleep. Poor cur, I dare say he has his distresses, as I have mine."

JUSTIFIES MOUSE SCARE

Gerard Tells Women Their Fear Is A Sensible Thing

That awful stigma upon woman, her fear of a mouse, a subject which has the joke-making record of at least all English-speaking countries has its "come-uppance" at last. James W. Gerard, ex-Ambassador to Germany, has taken away the stigma and shown that it is really one of those wonderful instincts women are supposed to have that is the cause of her fear and that it is justifiable.

Mr. Gerard was talking to a big audience of women at the house of Mrs. Ernesto G. Fabbri the other day, says The New York Times, and evidently wishing to be nice and polite to them he knocked the mouse scare right out of existence. It will be hard on the joke makers, both script and pictorial, but the women will have a chance for a little respite from one of the most antique knocks which has been handed them for several generations.

"A woman's fear of a mouse is a very sensible thing," said the Ex-Ambassador. "A long while ago the author of that wonderful book 'Robinson Crusoe' Daniel Defoe, wrote another great book which gave the cause of the Bubonic plague. If the English doctors had read it, it would not have remained for a Japanese doctor to get the credit of the great discovery."

"Defoe discovered that at the time of the plague rats and mice came up out of their holes dying with the plague, and as they died, and sometimes before, certain kinds of small lice, with which they were infested left them for human beings and carried the plague infection with them. So you can see that the fear that woman has is based on a very good foundation. There is nothing funny about it. It is perfectly good sense."

"Anyhow," concluded Mr. Gerard, "people may laugh at the mouse and the woman who jumps on a chair to get away from it, but how much more ridiculous is the man who leans against a bar (he was evidently thinking in past numbers) and sells the future of his child and his fortune for drink!"

Umbrellas

Umbrellas have great qualities. They are useful as props, they block out the sky. People think they are useful to keep off the rain. Never was there a greater delusion. Umbrellas like getting wet no more than any other product of civilization. They go out when it is fine; at other times they see to it that they stay indoors. If you are at all observant you will notice that an umbrella persists in forcing its company on you in fine weather; at other times it desists. When it pelts, the artful minx has arranged to remain at home. Damp and wretched yourself, she is neat and dry, sunning her delicately pointed toe in your rack stand.

Umbrellas are one of the quaintest jokes man has invented against himself. It was seeing the first man with the first umbrella that made the Cheshire cat grin; but then, the Cheshire cat was a vagabond himself and saw the humor of the thing. Umbrellas, clearly, have nothing whatever to do with vagabondage. One would as soon imagine Canute guilty of a top hat as a vagabond under an umbrella. He takes shelter, yes, under a hedge; in holes in the chalk; in hollows worn in rocks, like wild things; the wind may chase him at meal times (when he undoes the handkerchief bundle slung over his shoulder) to the lee side of walls and haystacks, and the tempest finds him lodged in old barns and wayside inns; or perchance, accepting the hospitality of the woodcutter's cottage in the lonely forest.

He gets wet. What matter? The wind drives him with the pain-staking love of a mother. Your Philistine would perish in agonies of cramp for he is one of little faith. When our vagabond ought to be dying, he is vaulting a stile or going on his way whistling merrily.

E. D. Newton, in Today.

OPALS FROM TREES

Process Of Metamorphosis Shown At American Museum

Opals that grow on trees—form trees that turn into opals—form one of the latest and most interesting exhibits of the American Museum of Natural History. The opal, as a gem, was comparatively little used at one time, but it has been growing in popularity during the last fifteen or twenty years. There are not so many people who now hesitate to wear it because it has been considered unlucky.

"It is the birth stone of October, lucky for any one born in that month. For the October baby 'they' say: 'Lay an opal on her breast and it will soothe her cares to rest.' The joy of owning one of the beautiful stones has driven away dull care from many people not of October birth. Now the Museum is showing the opal in tree masses and it is so beautiful that its popularity will be further increased."

It cannot be exactly said that opals grow on trees and one cannot recommend growing a forest of opal trees with a view to opening a jewelry store. Actually the opals are the trees which have become opal fossils. It is a slow process growing opals in this way and could not be recommended to the ordinary horticulturist or mineralogist. The Museum tree opals were grown in Humboldt County, Nevada, a good many thousand years ago, in the days when the great mastodon and the savage sabre-toothed tiger wandered through forests. Then there came a great earthquake and physical upheavings which uprooted mammoth trees and turned rocky mountains into swamps. That was when the opals got their start.

The trees, many feet below the water, became water-logged snags. This swamp water had been changed by volcanic action and was heavily charged with a solution of silica which changed the nature of the wood soaking in it while preserving the structure and changed it not to the ordinary fossil but into wonderful opals. Some are only semi-opals, but others are the most beautiful of gems, wonderful in brilliancy and beauty. The Museum shows the opal in its process of development up to its completion, in great sheets of opal, lakes of it, flashing brilliant tones of red, orange, blue and green, with dark specimens carrying what look to be volcanic fires in glowing orange-reds.

U.S. Red Cross Workers In Siberia Return Home

Fine Hospitals Established There Have Either Been Closed Or Transferred To Russian Hands And Relief Supplies Are Being Distributed

(Our Own Correspondent)

Vladivostok, Siberia, February 10.—More than half of the American Red Cross workers in Siberia are now en route to America or scattering to new posts of employment in the Far East.

The American Red Cross is not discontinuing now its work in Siberia but because of the series of rapid revolutionary events from the Ural mountains to Vladivostok and also because the national organization is turning its attention to work within the United States and curtailing its foreign commissions, the personnel in Siberia is being drastically reduced.

Virtually all the hospitals which the American Red Cross established in Siberia have been closed or transferred to Russian hands and the work now remaining to the American organization is to distribute the very large amounts of relief supplies in the Vladivostok warehouses or coming in on early ships, preparatory to winding up its activities this summer. That is the present program, although, like all that the Red Cross has undertaken in Siberia, the bewildering developments and upsets in the political, military and social life may change the program.

HOSPITALS EVACUATED

When the Kolchak army met its first serious defeat in June and July of 1919 on the Ural front the American Red Cross began its first withdrawal from the far west. Its two fine hospitals at Cheliabinsk and Tumen, far west of Omsk, were hastily evacuated, personnel, patients, equipment and supplies being placed aboard evacuation trains and brought east.

In November the 1,100-bed hospital at Omsk, long one of the finest American Red Cross institutions in Siberia, was also evacuated when the Bolsheviks advanced upon the capital city. At that time the Red Cross had two hospitals at Tomsk and one at Novonikolayevsk, all within the zone of danger, but the railroad line was becoming so congested and accommodations for the re-establishment of these hospitals in Middle and Eastern Siberia were so inadequate that the Red Cross could not continue to carry out its plan of bringing all of the equipment and supplies out of the danger zone and placing them in such cities as Irkutsk, Verkhne-Udinsk and Chita. It became necessary either to close the hospitals outright, with a loss of equipment and supplies and privations for the patients while they were being transferred into already over-crowded Russian institutions, or to turn the hospitals over to the Russian organizations which would promise to care for the patients. The latter course was decided upon and the American Red Cross thereupon began a policy, since continued of transferring its hospitals to Russian hands.

ZEMSTVO IN CONTROL

At the present time the only hospitals the American Red Cross operate in Siberia are the two at Vladivostok. One of these, the A.R.C. section of the Russian naval hospital, will soon be transferred to the Russians. The Primorsk Province Zemstvo Board is in control of far eastern Siberia since the successful revolution against the Kolchak authority on January 31, 1920, and the transfer will be made to such authorities as the Zemstvo Board designates. At present the Zemstvo is continuing with comparatively few changes the naval hospital as it existed under the Kolchak government.

Preparatory to turning over these hospitals the Medical and Nursing Departments of the Siberian Commission, A.R.C., selected and trained doctors and nurses to carry on the work after the Red Cross should leave.

One hundred and eighty-four Red Cross workers have left Siberia since the first of January. Most of them are en route direct to America, some going by Manila. The war department sent the transport Great Northern from Manila to Vladivostok to take home all the Red Cross personnel who could be immediately spared and 125 sailed from Vladivostok for San Francisco a few days ago. A previous group of 47 had gone by Manila and 12 sailed for China on February 8. By the end of February nearly all of the American women workers of the Siberian Commission will have left Vladivostok.

NO FEAR OF HOSTILITY

The last group of American women of the Red Cross coming from Middle Siberia arrived with Consul-General Harris on February 7. This was the fifth train to arrive from Irkutsk and Verkhne-Udinsk bringing Red Cross women. One of these trains was an American army echelon, carrying sick soldiers from Verkhne-Udinsk, where the 27th U. S. Infantry has been stationed since last spring. Seventeen Red Cross nurses attended these patients and came to Vladivostok with the train.

Although there was considerable anxiety at Vladivostok Red Cross headquarters about the welfare of the Red Cross people coming from Middle Siberia because of the revolutionary activities of several factions from Irkutsk eastward, there was no fear of any active hostility against the Americans. The Red Cross has enjoyed in Siberia entire immunity from animosity against its personnel and even in the considerable amount of anti-American propaganda which has been current for many months there was practically nothing of criticism against the Red Cross, but on the contrary a great deal of praise expressed publicly by representatives of all parties and by the press. Furthermore, American Red Cross trains have been traveling for months along the railway line from Irkutsk to Omsk, where anti-Kolchak guerilla forces were operating actively, and no Red Cross trains have been wrecked or attacked with armed force.

All of the Red Cross evacuation trains from Irkutsk to Verkhne-Udinsk came to Vladivostok in reasonably good time, suffering only the delays incidental to lack of engines, coal and crews.

GIVEN SAFE CONDUCT

One train was held at Pogranichnaya on the Manchurian border because revolutionaries secured control of Nikolai, an important junction city between Pogranichnaya and Vladivostok. At that time a mission of the revolutionaries from Nikolai was in Vladivostok preparatory to the successful attempt of the revolutionary Zemstvo forces to overthrow General Rozanoff, Kolchak's representative here. The Red Cross arranged with no difficulty whatever for this train which was held at Pogranichnaya to be brought through Nikolai under guarantee of safe conduct and speedy despatch from the revolutionaries, who lived up to their word and saw that the train was furnished with an engine at Nikolai and brought to Vladivostok through the opposing lines.

Four men of the American Red Cross are reported to have been captured by the Bolsheviks in Western Siberia several weeks ago. Nothing has been heard directly from them, but the general attitude of the revolutionaries toward Americans and particularly the fact that the Red Cross has suffered from no hostile attacks is taken to indicate that these men are not in personal danger.
